Family members hold photos of the victims of last year's Gen Z protest after addressing the media in Nairobi on June 20, 2025, ahead of the first anniversary of the protest on June 25. Families and lawyers on Friday urged Kenyan police and politicians to allow a peaceful march in memory of those killed during mass protests last year. The East African country has seen violent clashes between protesters, paid agitators, and the police in the run-up to the anniversary of the Gen Z-led demonstrations. Those rallies peaked on June 25, 2024, when protesters stormed parliament, angry over proposed tax rises and corruption, and were met with live fire from security forces.
